Save the Date— “Because You’re Worth It! Achieving Advancement and Fair Compensation in the Legal Profession”

At the charge of Immediate Past President, Paula H. Holderman, the ISBA Standing Committee on Women & the Law took on the task of adapting the Toolkit for Gender Equity in Partner Compensation, created in 2012 by the ABA Gender Equity Task Force, to promote the advancement of women attorneys in Illinois. After nearly two years of research and planning we will be presenting a half-day program called, “Because You’re Worth It!: Achieving Advancement and Fair Compensation in the Legal Profession” on May 7, 2015, at 1:00 p.m. at the ISBA Chicago Regional Office.

The program will be a compilation of storytelling, research analysis, legal update and a panel discussion, designed to provide practical methods for up and coming attorneys to make their careers what they want them to be. The goal is to bring together practicing lawyers interested in advancing their careers with managing partners and firm leaders who want to make their firms more hospitable to quality attorneys, both men and women. Check out our fantastic program!

The ACLU’s Illinois Judicial Bypass Coordination Project

By Mary F. Petruchius

When a young woman under the age of 18 in Illinois finds herself pregnant, she can turn to the American Civil Liberties Union (ACLU) for help. The ACLU’s Judicial Bypass Coordination Project provides minors with information about the state’s parental notice law for those seeking abortions and assistance in obtaining what is called a “judicial bypass.”

The ACLU Web site describes in detail what a pregnant female under the age of 18 needs to know about abortion in Illinois. It gives an overview of the Illinois Parental Notice of Abortion Law, explaining that one who is under 18 must notify an adult family member before she can have an abortion. Notification simply means informing the adult family member and it may be made in person, by telephone, or by certified mail. An adult family member is a person over the age of 21 who is the minor’s parent, grandparent, step-parent who lives with the minor, or the minor’s legal guardian.

It clarifies that notification is not consent, pointing out that the minor’s physician must notify the adult family member of the minor’s choice, not seek the adult's permission. The adult family member does not have the right to tell the minor that she cannot have the abortion. The exceptions to the notification requirement are: medical emergency; the adult family member's written waiver of notification; the minor is a victim of abuse; she is married, divorced, or emancipated; or by order of the Court after a successful judicial bypass hearing.

A judicial bypass occurs when a judge enters an order allowing the minor to obtain an abortion without notification to an adult family member. The minor must meet certain criteria in order to have an abortion, absent adult family member notification. The minor must prove to the judge that she is either sufficiently mature and well enough informed to make an intelligent decision to abort or that notification would not be in the minor's best interest. The judicial bypass hearing is confidential and the minor has the right to free legal counsel. Examples are given of what makes a minor mature and informed and of situations in which notice would not be in the minor's best interest.

The Illinois Parental Notice of Abortion Law states that the minor is to be appointed a guardian ad litem for the procedure. If the minor is satisfied with her attorney, she may ask the Court to appoint her attorney as guardian ad litem.

In preparation for the judicial bypass, the website recommends that the minor become informed regarding possible alternatives to abortion (parenting and adoption) and presents a thoughtful approach to those options, citing in particular a warning against certain crisis pregnancy centers that falsely purport themselves to be "all options" clinics. It advises the minor to complete the 55-question "Lawyer Meeting Questionnaire" prior to meeting with her attorney, and also discusses abortion costs and payment options.

The judicial bypass hearing process is swift and a decision speedy. Once a petition is filed, a judge must render a decision within 48 hours. Under certain circumstances, the judge may make the decision immediately following hearing. Should a decision take longer than 48 hours from the time of filing, the judicial bypass is considered automatically granted.

This program is so very important and provides valuable services and great support to those young women in need. If you would like to be a volunteer attorney for the ACLU's Illinois Judicial Bypass Coordination Project, please call 877.44.BYPASS or 312.560.6607.

The Invention of Wings by Sue Monk Kidd

A book review by Cindy Galway Buys

"If you must err, do so on the side of audacity." This is one of the first lines spoken by Sarah Grimké, one of the two main characters, in Sue Monk Kidd's powerful novel about abolition of slavery. While Sarah does not always follow her own advice, she does become one of the most infamous anti-slavery spokespersons of her day.

Sarah is the daughter of wealthy Charleston, South Carolina family who was born in 1793 into privilege, including the ownership of slaves. But Sarah was a curious child and a voracious reader and from the time she was quite young, she questioned the morality of slavery. When her mother presented Sarah with her own slave, Handful, to be her handmaiden, on the occasion of Sarah's 11th birthday, Sarah tried to emancipate Handful by signing a certificate of manumission freeing Handful (which Sarah's parents promptly destroyed).

Handful is the other protagonist in the story, growing up alongside Sarah. The author juxtaposes the two girl's lives to demonstrate both their differences and their similarities. Both want to be loved and accepted, but also long to be free—Handful yearns for physical freedom from slavery while Sarah yearns for freedom from the constraints of society which prevent her from pursuing a vocation and demand her obedience to a traditional female role subservient to men. As Handful put it to Sarah, "My body might be a slave, but not my mind. For you it's the other way round." Handful takes many risks to taste freedom, including sneaking out to assist Derek Vesey, a free black man and preacher who attempts to lead a slave rebellion in Charleston. The treatment of the slaves is brutal, but the slaves' response is a testament to their strength, courage, and dignity.

The novel is filled with other rich characters, including Handful's mother, Charlotte, who refuses to give up on the dream of being free and asserts her independence in every way she can, and Angelina, Sarah's beautiful and rebellious younger sister, who takes up the cause of abolition alongside her sister.

The novel tells the true story of Sarah and Angelina Grimké, who surmount many social barriers by traveling around the country preaching abolition to women and later to men. They are threatened, ostracized and outlawed for their efforts. And the more they ponder the plight of the slaves, the more they feel their own constraints as women—unable to vote, unable to own property, and unable to be pursue a university education and profession. Thus, the fight for freedom from slavery also becomes a fight for women's equality.

Prior to reading this novel, I was not familiar with the Grimké sisters' trailblazing work in the early 1800s on behalf of freedom and equality for all. Although the novel is classified as historical fiction, the author hews closely to historical truth. If you enjoyed Sue Monk Kidd's earlier bestselling book, The Secret Life of Bees, you are sure to like this one as well. ■
